

GREEK ALLIES 2017-2018

- Greek Allies went on the road this spring hosting conversations at 9 different chapters across all of the Greek councils, some of which were attended by upwards of 40 students
- Conversation topics focused on gender norms reinforced at parties, Women's History Month, toxic masculinity, drag culture and much more

Greek Allies invites students to bring both their knowledge of advocacy/allyship as well as their experience of membership within a fraternity or sorority. Students are then provided the opportunity to talk about the intersectionality of these through peer-to-peer interaction. Greek Allies aims to play a larger role in fostering students' sense of belonging to the fraternal community as well as the University as a whole.

HERE'S WHAT STUDENTS HAD TO SAY AFTER GREEK ALLIES MEETINGS...

"It was nice to have an open conversation. We don't have enough of these difficult conversations on campus."

"One person can do a lot of change by doing something that isn't considered normal."

"Allyship comes in various forms but always makes an impact."

LOOKING FORWARD...

Greek Allies attempted to host a confidential Greek Coming Out Support Space. However, students didn't sign up for the experience. Now that Greek Allies has widely marketed the group over the spring, the student leaders are re-looking at the possibility of providing support to students in the process of coming out.
